

Argus Orthopaedic Zone

Finally Here! Thank Goodness

Transforming patient information into patient understanding.

When I set out to redesign our office teaching website www.orthopodsurgeon.com, I did not realize it would take nearly a year! Not only is it a new improved website, but perhaps more importantly it has an Archive of all 71 articles I have written for Shepherd Argus.

Archive

In the new www.orthopodsurgeon.com website there is a list from 71 back to 1 of all the titles of articles I have written for Argus Orthopaedic Zone. Click on the title of an article and the whole text of that article comes up to be viewed or copied. Amazing, but it works!

Why Do This?

Well, I have always felt that what I am doing for you is like a course in Orthopaedic Surgery and musculoskeletal topics.

It is a vast field of information. I am trying to make information available to you every week that hopefully you or someone in your family can use in becoming more healthy. I don't want all the information to be lost. Now it won't be!

It will be easy to simply scroll back over the topics and find one. Click on it and the whole article comes up just like it appeared in the Shepherd Argus.

Web site Library and Newspaper Articles

There is a section of the office website www.orthopodsurgeon.com which is a Library of articles I have written for you about all the things people need to know about Orthopaedics and musculoskeletal topics. As part of the Library you can also enter Your Orthopaedic Connection, which has hundreds of more articles.

The Shepherd Argus Orthopaedic Zone weekly articles deal with similar material all written by me in a little more informal style.

Local Connection

Much of the health information you read on the internet is not factual. In most cases you have no clue who wrote it, if a name is even given at all.

The most accurate information comes from someone whose name you know and who writes about what they are doing every day in their work.

Furthermore, I plan to continue to work in your midst and keep informing anyone who cares to learn by reading the weekly Shepherd Argus Orthopaedic article and logging onto the website www.orthopodsurgeon.com for tons of more great information.

Our goal is simple - To help people return to more pain free, functional lives.

Good health. Good life. All the best to you.

Be well.
